

From: kouryab
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 11:56am
Subject: Anti-trust settlement

I think the so-called settlement with Microsoft will do nothing except insure that they will increase their monopoly. If they are allowed to give schools old computers and software to run them all this will do is make sure that these schools will have to update their systems with Microsoft software. Most old computers will not run anything new as far as current operating systems. What should be done is to make Microsoft pay the settlement amount in cash and then allow the schools to buy what they need and not be restricted to old and out dated equipment and operating systems.
Al Koury